Liturgical Reflection...

This Sunday the Church commemorates the Solemnity of All Saints. Because November 1st falls on a Sunday in Ordinary Time, All Saints is commemorated over the Thirty-First Sunday in Ordinary Time. Today we remember the men, women, children who are in the kingdom of God. From heaven they intercede for us on earth. Sacred images of the saints, in accordance with the most ancient tradition, should be displayed in the church for veneration by the faithful and be so arranged as to lead the faithful toward the mysteries of faith. There should usually be only one image of a saint in the church. General Instruction of the Roman Missal, Number 318.

Scripture Reflection

Matthew's Beatitudes are a summation of the Christian life and a guide to sainthood. Each one describes a characteristic demonstrated by the spiritually fortunate or holy person. They are the poor in spirit, the humble, who know their need for God; they mourn, especially due to human alienation from God; they are meek; they hunger and thirst to be filled with God; they are merciful, single-heartedly attached to God, and offer peace. These virtuous people, who have heard the call of Christ, follow him to the Kingdom.

The call for Christians to live up to their baptismal call ought to be a constant reminder that not only are we called to be saints, we are saints, however imperfectly we are running the race to the heavenly goal. We have exemplars, for we live in communion with the saints, who share in the fullness of God's life presently. And the Catechism of the Catholic Church says: "At the present time some of his disciples are pilgrims on earth. Others have died and are being purified, while still others are in glory, contemplating in full light, God himself triune and one, exactly as he is" (No. 954). The feast of All Saints is a necessary reminder for us whenever we doubt that God could make a saint of you or me. Sainthood is our purpose and destiny.

Those saints in heaven share the life for which we are being prepared, but they are not simply models for us, they intercede on our behalf. The Revelation of John promises us that the saints are not just a few but a "great crowd" who worship God, calling us home. Jesus offers that his followers are "blessed" or "happy," when they walk Christ's path of discipleship. In spite of persecution, being reviled or even mourning, the follower of Jesus is "happy" when showing mercy, making peace and thirsting for righteousness. But to be a saint, as Jesus encourages us, is to live the happy life now, in which virtue allows us to participate in the life of God with joy. Life in the kingdom of God is the goal, but the Beatitudes allow us to participate in that life now with God and all the saints. We are saints, called to be saints, yearning to share in life with the saints.

• How would you describe the main virtues needed for a modern-day saint?

Who are the saints among your family and friends, living or deceased?
