Saint John XXIII, Pope (continued)

While the pope was at the prison, an old man with a lengthy prison record approached him, confessing: “I have made many mistakes, Holy Father.” Bending down to the kneeling man, John wiped his tears away, raised him and embraced him with a warm bear hug. He consoled the man with these words, “I looked into your eyes with my eyes. I have put my heart near your heart.” As some 1,000 prisoners assembled to meet and greet the Holy Father, he addressed them as “dear sons and brothers,” telling them that his own brother had once been arrested and jailed for hunting without a license and that he understood why a man might break the law to steal for his hungry family.

His visit was a sensation, not only among the inmates and prison officials but also by news reporters who were fascinated by a pope who visited a jail. Later, John wrote in his journal, “. . . great astonishment in the Roman, Italian and international press. I was hemmed in on all sides: authorities, photographers, prisoners, wardens. . .”

Because of his age at election — 76 — it was assumed he would merely be a transitional or “caretaker” pope. Though his reign was brief, only five years, it is regarded by many historians as the most important pontificate since the Middle Ages. This is due to his decision to call an ecumenical council of the Universal Church, the first since 1870 and only the 21st in the Church’s history.

Unfortunately, John XXIII did not live to see his Vatican Council vision realized. From the start of the first session, his health began to diminish. Only those closest to him knew he was suffering from stomach cancer. Because of his age, surgery was deemed too risky and, as a result, his health continued to decline. He appeared at his window overlooking St. Peter’s Square for the last time on May 23, 1963. Shortly after that he reassured those around him, “My bags are packed and I am ready, very ready to go.” Earlier, he spoke of the same readiness in a letter written to his older brother Savero, “My eighty years of life complete tell me, as they tell you, dear Savero, that what is more important is always to keep ourselves well prepared for a sudden departure, because this is what matters most: to make sure of eternal life, trusting in the goodness of the Lord who sees all and makes provision for all.”

Angelo Roncalli — Pope John XXIII — died quietly on June 3, 1963. It was the Vatican press office that issued this final bulletin: “He suffers no more.” Outside the papal window, thousands of faithful pilgrims in St. Peter’s Square began to grieve along with millions around the world.

Many times Pope John XXIII came before groups saying “I am your brother.” The world believed him!

REV. PARACHIN, an ordained minister of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), writes from Tulsa, Okla.

*OCTOBER 22, 2017
Scripture Reflection*

King Herod and his sons minted coins that conformed to biblical laws forbidding human or divine images. Herodian coins of Jesus' day displayed abstract designs and brief inscriptions of the coin's weight and year of mintage. This was not the case with the coins necessary for Roman taxes, which circulated alongside the others. Each carried a portrait of the emperor on the front and a relief of the goddess Roma on the back. These coins troubled many Jews. Their images violated the Torah. Their inscription was a blasphemy that affirmed the divinity of emperors and the validity of pagan worship. Whether or not a faithful Jew could use such an object provoked fierce debates.

Some Pharisees try to trap Jesus in this debate. "Is it lawful to pay the census tax to Caesar or not?" The Pharisees did pay the tax. Not so the Zealots. Zealots resisted the tax. By drawing attention to the coin, Jesus sidesteps this trap. Their use implied that it was the emperor, the son of a god, who rewarded labor and provided daily bread. Matthew's sly implication, that Jesus was not carrying any Roman coins but that his opponents could produce one without trouble, reveals the depth of their cooperation with Roman power. In Jesus' mind, their possession of such coins revealed not just a love of wealth but a deeper reliance on false power and a corresponding weakening of faith in God.

Christ's disciples today are subject to similar false powers. Many struggle against a reliance on systems or powers that confer social status but not community, power but not trust, wealth but not fulfillment, pleasure but not joy. By contrast, God, who requires only our faith, provides the love of family and friends, the wisdom to reveal the kingdom in every place, the power to bind up broken hearts and a life that triumphs even over death.

- What does the statement "Repay to Caesar what belongs to Caesar and to God what belongs to God" mean to you in your life experience?

OUR LADY URGES US TO PRAY THE HOLY ROSARY FOR PEACE AND OFFER SACRIFICES BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE!

Action: How To Be Like Pope John XXIII

- 1. Live with a sacred optimism. John practiced a “cheerfulness at all times” and rejected voices of “those prophets of gloom, who are always forecasting disaster, as though the end of the world were at hand.”
- 2. Ask others to pray for you. When it became known that John was to be made a cardinal he wrote his family to share the news and request them to “ask (God) to make me a good cardinal, a peace-loving and gentle cardinal.” Whenever you face a difficult decision or a major life challenge, ask those close to you for their prayers.
- 3. Curtail criticism. “See everything, overlook a great deal, correct a little,” was John’s philosophy. Curtail criticism. You’ll be happier. So will your family and friends.
- 4. Practice self-restraint. Follow John’s lead: “It is my nature to talk too much. A ready tongue is one of God’s good gifts but it must be handled with care and respect, with moderation, so that I may be welcome and not found to be a bore.”
- 5. Read biographies of spiritual lives. One of the best ways to deepen your own spiritual life is to read about others who are models of spirituality. Pope John loved St. Francis de Sales, calling him the “gentlest of saints” and a “magnificent figure.” He wrote, “I have read his life so many times!”
- 6. Practice what you preach. In all your relationships be a model of integrity by practicing what you preach. “I really must make sure that I never tell others to do what I do not try to practice myself,” John noted in his journal.
- 7. Be kind. This was a lifelong goal of John. “My dealing with others must always be marked with dignity, simplicity and kindness, a radiant and serene kindness.”
- 8. Observe yourself. John called this an examination of conscience, and it was something he did all his life. From time to time, take a deep and honest look at yourself so that any issues may be addressed before they enlarge. After one period of self-study John wrote, “Having made a general examination of my behavior during these recent days, I have found good reason to blush and feel humble.”
- 9. Remember that you are a role model. We are visible to family, friends, colleagues, neighbors, and acquaintances. Be a positive influence. That’s the sentiment John expressed. “One learns Christian behavior in social and economic matters by actual Christian action in those fields.”
- 10. Don’t take yourself so seriously. A few days after he was elected pope, John’s family was granted a special audience. The Roncallis entered the papal apartments timidly and nervously dropped their gifts. Peasant bread, ham and wine, packed in brightly covered cloths tumbled to the floor. John eased their embarrassment. He smiled and said reassuringly, “Don’t be afraid. It’s only me.” The lesson from John for us: Lighten up. Don’t take yourself so seriously. — *The End.
